This curriculum offers a foundational breadth and depth to understanding the conduct and value of human social science. It also offers the student a specific focus, an identity and expertise, and freedom to create a program that best meets their professional and life goals. Specific goals for students include how to: (1) conduct and evaluate research efforts – reported both in journals and in the press, (b) use interpretive frameworks to offer coherent renditions of the meaning of human experience, (c) evaluate contexts of family interaction, and (d) apply family science knowledge to real-life issues that emerge in practice and daily family life.

CAREERS:

There are many possible careers open to family studies majors. Because of the variety of options, SFL 101 has been created to help students create a course outline that will best fit their goals. The family studies faculty can provide individual consultation as students demand. An internship as a capstone experience is also an excellent opportunity to explore career options. For more information on careers in your major, please contact the University Career Center or the College of Family, Home, and Social Sciences Academic Advisement Center.

PREPARATION FOR GRADUATE STUDIES:

Students who plan to attend graduate school should take SFL 336 and 460. In addition, SFL 330 will help students explore options for graduate study in marriage and family therapy. Other 300- and 400-level courses that emphasize human development or family studies will prepare students for the marriage, family, and human development graduate program.

RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES:

Students are encouraged to work with professors on research projects that help them experience the “how to” of being a family scientist. Students may contact faculty individually, seek mentoring grants from the university, register for internships (the capstone course) that help them integrate classroom learning with real-world experience, and create projects of their own. Contact the family studies faculty.
