GENERAL INFORMATION:
GENERAL INFORMATION:
The Communications Studies sequence exists as a counterpoint to the other sequences within the School of Communications. Whereas each of the other sequences excels in providing specialized instruction in a particular discipline of communications (e.g., Public Relations, Advertising or News Media), the Communications Studies sequence takes a more generalized approach. The sequence coursework equips students with a solid foundation in the areas of critical thinking, research, writing, presentation and communications theory, but then grants students the freedom to select their supplementary coursework from the School’s catalog of elective offerings. These courses span a variety of interests, including digital media, popular culture, advocacy, international issues, and many others. The combination of required and strategically-selected supplementary coursework begets a degree program that is highly customizable. With this freedom, however, comes the charge for students to work closely with their faculty advisor to make their professional goals known, and to work together in the creation of a viable learning plan. The Communications Studies sequence acknowledges that the lines between disciplines (in many case) are blurring, and it seeks to equip students with the skills they feel are necessary to succeed in their personalized path - whether this path is professional or academic in nature, and whether it leads them deeper into the communications industry, or on to other disciplines.

SCHOOL REQUIREMENTS:
1. Each student must be Pre-Comms in order to apply to the major. Contact the college advisement center for admission requirements, or comms.byu.edu.
2. All students must take a campus writing course before applying for admission to the major. WRTG 150 Advanced Writing Course fulfills this requirement. AP credit does not.
3. Complete a minimum of 72 hours in courses outside of the department, while meeting BYU’s University Core requirements.
4. Every student is required to complete an internship.

Although the school operates an internship office (280 Brimhall Building) that serves as a clearinghouse for internship information, the responsibility for securing an internship rests with the student. However, students may not embark on any internship without prior approval from a faculty advisor, before processing appropriate documents with the Internship Office (280 BRMB), and without being enrolled in Comms 496R.
5. In certain courses, students will be required to demonstrate proficiency in InDesign, Adobe Photoshop and Adobe Illustrator by portfolio review.
See the School of Communications in 360 BRMB.
6. For program objectives, please see: learningoutcomes.byu.edu.

THE DISCIPLINE:
Communication is a central part of the human experience and, as such, the study of communications works its way into a diverse set of professional and academic disciplines. The Communications Studies sequence is designed to prepare students to pursue their professional goals, by focusing on the development of key skills in critical thinking, research, writing, presentation and communications theory. Students are urged to use the large selection of elective credits in the sequence to tailor their education to future endeavors, whether they fall into the traditional communications roles of marketing, public relations, advertising and broadcast media, or other endeavors such as academia, lae, entrepreneurship, etc. To develop a wide understanding of the world and the processes that make society work, students are encouraged to supplement their Communications coursework with relevant electives from other departments.

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES:
The Communications Studies sequence is designed to provide students with a general set of skills in critical thinking, research, writing, presentation and communications theory. These skills form the foundation for success in a variety of professional and academic fields and - through strategic scheduling and selection of supplementary coursework - students will find themselves prepared to perform in variety of environments, both within and outside of the traditional communications trajectory.

OFF-CAMPUS PROFESSIONAL INTERNSHIPS:
As part of the Communications Studies sequence, and after the necessary prerequisites have been completed, students will have the opportunity to choose between a mentored research practicum or an off-campus professional internship. For mentored research practicums, a faculty advisor must be selected to approve and supervise the project. For off-campus internships, a full-time practitioner may serve as a supervisor, after gaining approval from the faculty advisor. Approval for either of these options must come in advance of their initiation.

FACULTY ADVISOR:
Check with the School of Communications, in 360 BRMB, to be assigned a faculty advisor.

MAP DISCLAIMER
While every reasonable effort is made to ensure accuracy, there are some student populations that could have exceptions to listed requirements. Please refer to the university catalog and your college advisement center/department for complete guidelines.
